Oxford Street District consultation – have your say

As proud custodians of the Oxford Street District, Westminster City Council is hugely ambitious to ensure its future success. As a resident, you will be only too aware of the challenges that the area faces such as pollution and poor public spaces. That's why Westminster City Council has developed a new comprehensive Place Strategy to really improve the wider district.

In developing this work, we have listened carefully to those who know best – those who live, work, visit and do business in the area. It's because we do listen that we took full scale pedestrianisation of Oxford Street off the table as a possible option in the summer and then started to develop our new plans.

In developing our fresh strategy we are seeking to enhance the historic neighbourhoods that give the area such character and which are called home to many thousands of people. The district's ongoing success is important as it creates so many employment and other opportunities for the city. But that shouldn't come at the expense of those who live in the area.

We now want to know what everyone with an interest in securing the area's future success – particularly our residents – thinks about our proposals. This letter sets out how you can find out more about what is being suggested and how you can have your say (see overleaf). We look forward to hearing from as many residents as possible so that, together, we can secure the future of this vital part of Westminster and London.

Yours sincerely,
